Can Functional Neurology Decrease Autistic Symptoms in Brandon?

Dr. Gilbert Jaudy, DC, DACNB, FACFN, FABVR, FABCDD

Interview with patient's grandmother by Mike Bundrant - Healthy Times Newspaper

Recently, I had the pleasure of sitting down with Dr. Rose to talk about the treatment her grandson receives at Dr. Jaudy's office. Dr. Rose is a grandmother that is on a mission to help her seventeen-year-old autistic grandson, Brandon. After only 4-7 treatments she is very encouraged by the results she sees in Brandon.

When asked what life with Brandon was like prior to the brain-based treatments, Dr. Rose describes Brandon as hard to motivate, non-communicative, not able to walk straight and beginning to develop a hunchback. Like most families on the journey to heal a child from autism, Dr. Rose investigated and invested in many therapeutic approaches since learning of Brandon's autism. She drove him all over Los Angeles, San Diego and the Coachella Valley trying the treatment of the moment. Some, such as biofeedback, resulted in some success. But, she kept asking herself how she could get Brandon to function better with his family and the outside world.

After 6 weeks with Dr. Jaudy, she is amazed and so proud of Brandon's progress - there is a new young man in her house! Brandon is conversing with family members, establishing eye contact, more articulate and he actually listens when someone else is talking. He now partakes in the conversation instead of observing it. Those that interact with Brandon daily are very encouraged to discover that he pays attention more now. When Dr. Rose first visited Dr. Jaudy, she said she was so impressed with his professionalism, thoroughness and positive spirit. It was obvious to her that he actually knew what he was doing. After trying biofeedback, chelation therapy and now Functional Neurology, Dr. Rose concluded that the best results come from Dr. Jaudy. Dr. Rose said, "I respect Dr. Jaudy's work and he works in Brandon's best interest. Of everything we've tried this doctor provided the greatest transformation in the shortest amount of time and we are so grateful to him."
